The track was in surprisingly good shape to-day and handicaps which had been based on heavy going were worthless.

ONE PASSENGER COACH TELESCOPED BY IMPACT.

Special Train Bound for the Steamer While Waiting in Breval Tunnel Is Hit by Cherbourg-Paris Express, Which Finds No Signals Set.

MANTES, France, Sept. 25 .- The Transatlantic train carrying firstclass, passengers from Paris to Cherbourg, where they were to embark on the White Star Line steamer Adriatic, was telescoped to-day in the Twenty persons were injured.

The train taking passengers to Cherbourg for embarkation on the North German Lloyd steamer Crown Prince Wilhelm, which was tollowing the train having on board the Adriatic's passengers, proceeded to her destination by another route.

CRASH CAME IN THE TUNNEL.

The first, containing the second-class baggage, stopped just beyond the Breval Tunnel, owing to an accident to the locomotive. The second section, containing the first-class passengers, was stopped by a signas when in the middle of the tunnel. "

The regular train for Rouen followed the second section of the passenger train for Cherbourg, and although there was a red signal up at the entrance of the tunnel, it only reduced its speed and entered while going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. The collision followed-CREW OF STALLED TRAIN TO BLAME.

The disaster is said to have been due to the negligence of the crew of the train carrying the Transatlantic passengers, as no lights were burning in the rear of the train and no torpedoes were placed on the track behind it, as required by the regulations when a train balts in a

This neglect caused another train to run into the passenger trains bound for Cherbourg.

The names of the persons injured were not obtainable this evening at the office of the White Star line, where only brief despatches, without any details, had been received until 4.30 P. M.

The Rouen train crashed into the rear car of the Transatlantic train, causing a horrible wreck. The locomotive of the former completely telescoped the rear coach of the latter and in the smoke and darkness an awful panic ensued. It was a miracle that nobody was killed. Several of them were suffering from broken arms or legs but not one was fatally

An American girl who was going home with her mother was caught in the wreckage and pinned down by some iron work. Hours elapsed before the girl was extricated from her painful position. Her mother esca; ed by jumping out of the door of their car just as the crash came.

The Adriatic's passengers, after they had recovered from the panic ollowing the collision, went manfully to work in aiding the rescue of the injured, who were taken to the hospitals at Mantes and Bonnieres, Thanks to the efforts of the Prefect of Mantes and the railroad and horities a new train was soon made up and the Adriatic's uninjured pas-

The railroad company during the evening received a telegram from Evreux announcing the arrival there of seven of the injured. They suffered from wounds and contusions. One American lady insisted upon going to Cherbourg, though she was badly hurt.

One of the passengers, who was suffering from a broken leg, was taken
